

What we do

Sue Ryder is here to make sure everyone approaching the end of their life or living with grief can access the support they need.

Our doctors and nurses help people who are dying to live well, in our hospices and at home. Whether that's managing pain and symptoms or helping families to make special memories during their last days together, we go above and beyond to make sure people receive the end-of-life care they deserve.

We support people aged 18 and over who are living with a terminal illness or grieving the loss of a loved one.

Our services include:

- Inpatient care
- Hospice at Home
- Physiotherapy and occupational therapy
- Wellbeing and Community Support Services
- Online Bereavement Support

Sue Ryder's palliative and bereavement support is offered free of charge, but we rely on your generous donations to meet the gap in funding between what the government provides and the actual cost of delivering care. With your help, we can support people through the most difficult times of their lives and ensure no one faces dying or grief alone.

“
Sue Ryder were our guardian angels, our shining light throughout the darkest of times with my beloved dad.

– Jessica who's dad was cared for by Sue Ryder

”

Whatever you can give, your support means we can be there when it matters

It costs £15,000 a day to provide care to the people in your local community when they need it most.

8,700 people Last year we cared for more than 8,700 people in our hospices and in their homes.

It costs around £3,244 for someone to be cared for at home in their final days by a Sue Ryder Nurse.

£65 could pay for one bereavement counselling session, supporting someone who is experiencing grief.

£600 could help fund another 24 hours of expert care, so our Sue Ryder doctors and nurses can manage patients' pain and symptoms and make more space for a family's final days to be filled with love.

55% Our research shows the demand for palliative care is expected to increase by 55% by 2030. With your support we can help fund vital care and support.

£25 could fund an hour of expert care.